Today, the customer does the work

1

Log in

Details, photos, reviews and exceptional opening hours are all updated inside the service.

2

Remember

Many customers forget, or don’t have time – especially for one-off changes like holiday hours.

3

Closed door

Search results show outdated information, and people turn up when the business is closed.

The less a customer logs in, the less value they get from Connect.

Next: Connect suggests, the customer approves

Today

- The customer logs in to make changes
- The customer has to notice what needs doing
- The customer types in every change
- Every change starts from scratch

Where we're heading

- Connect contacts the customer – no login
- Connect suggests changes, using data, and explains why
- One click: accept, edit or reject
- Connect learns, and can get standing permission for recurring changes

Passive customers get value too – and the customer always has the final say.

THE CHALLENGE

Build a working demo of the whole chain

The demo must show all five steps – a complete chain beats a perfect single step.
Great customer experience wins: easy to act on, clear value from Connect.

What the customer might receive

Hi Café Aurora!

All Saints' Day is on Saturday 31 Oct. Last year you were open 10–15 that day, but no exception hours have been added this year, so Google now shows your regular Saturday hours (9–18).

We suggest: Sat 31 Oct 10–15

Approve | Edit | No thanks

Detect

Last year's exception hours, and none added this year

Suggest, with the reason

What Google shows now, and why it is wrong

Decide

One tap, no login – the customer has the last word

How we'll evaluate

Suggestion quality

Sensible and backed by data? The scoring script measures it on hidden test data.

Customer experience

Does a busy entrepreneur get the message at once, and is approving easy?

Reliability

Does the customer always have the last word? How are wrong suggestions prevented?

Extensibility

Which similar use cases would the same loop serve? Automatic posts and review replies are already live or on the roadmap.

Learning

Is the next suggestion better after an edit or a decline? Can recurring changes get standing permission?

All five steps

The demo must show the whole chain. A complete chain beats a perfect single step.

What to submit, and where to find us

Submit

- Working demo of the five steps – 2–3 minute video
- Code repository with a README: how to run it, data sources, libraries and licences
- Your 3–5 key data sources, where Connect would get them in production, and what didn't work
- Your final customer messages as text
- How it behaves for a customer with no history
- A short pitch deck

Bonus: replace at least one dataset file with a live source, and tell us what you learned.
